

3 - 17 MARCH 2006 ONLY £1

Miss WORLD

Get the insider scoop on the global goodies sending UK beauty sleuths into a spin

Much like beauty pageant contestants, international cosmetic brands capitalise on their country of origin and frequently exotic looks. At a time when the Internet can rustle up reams of far-flung finds at the click of a perfectly manicured finger tip, and niche boutiques like Space NK nestle comfortably in the nation's high streets, temptingly displaying their jet-set wares, it's easier than ever before to get your hands on the kind of beauty booty usually reserved for celebrities or ladies who lunch.

With universal brands now setting-up home on global websites and chemist shelves across the country, plus television shopping channels and mail order facilities proving increasingly popular, interest in international fayre has hit an all-time high. So, get in on the international action and take a round-the-world beauty trip as we reveal the best buys on the planet.

11 Paris Hilton

12

19 N.V. Perricone M.D. Alpha Lipoic Acid Evening Facial Emollient, £90. Achieves noticeably brighter, plumper and more youthful skin.

20 Jan Marini Skin Research C-Esta Serum, £64. Evens tones, reduces skin sensitivity and assists collagen production.

21 Dr Denese Doctor's Microdermabrasion Cream, £12.95. Improves the appearance of fine lines and acne scars. Can be used on the face, chest and back.

21

Demi Moore